

Sheldon Inaugurates Educational Campaign

Arthur F. Sheldon, One of Founders of Rotary and Head of Sheldon School, Invited by Chamber of Commerce to Head Educational Movement Here—Will Lecture for All Classes.

Arthur F. Sheldon, head of the famous Sheldon School of Chicago and one of the charter members of the first Rotary Club which was organized in Chicago, has been invited by the Kingston Chamber of Commerce to head an educational campaign in this city this summer and fall. Mr. Sheldon inaugurated the campaign Monday evening when he addressed the employees of the Kingston Gas & Electric Company on "Service," and held the closest attention of his hearers for over an hour.

Mr. Sheldon was born on a farm near Vernon, Michigan, and attended and taught district school. He received his first insight into human nature and salesmanship by selling books to pay his way through college and graduated from the University of Michigan Law School in 1892 with the degree LL. B. He became sales manager of a $3,000,000 organization from which he was graduated to form his own organization.

In 1902 he founded the famous Sheldon School in Chicago and he is editor-in-chief of the publications issued by the school. Mr. Sheldon is the author of a number of well known books. He is also the author of the famous Rotary Club motto: "He profits most who serves best."

For several years Mr. Sheldon has been devoting his time to teaching the "Science of Human Engineering" in the leading industrial organizations throughout the country, including the Pennsylvania Railroad and John Wanamaker's in New York City. He has been heard from the lecture platform throughout the United States and in Canada, England and Scotland.

In addition to the educational campaign to be carried on in Kingston under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Sheldon will also carry on a similar campaign in Verburgh and Poughkeepsie and probably in Hudson.

He will have charge of a man-building, business-building and community-building campaign to be known as "The Forum of Fundamentals," which will be divided into two parts, public service and personal service. The work here will be carried on through the educational committee of the Chamber of Commerce without charge or without obligation and among other things will consist of a series of group meetings for employers only.

These meetings are generally held in the afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce rooms and there will be enough of them so that all employers of Kingston and vicinity can attend at least one of the meetings. Among the subjects discussed will be "Profit Losses: Their Cause and Cure," "Man-Power and Its Relation to Quality, Quantity and Economy Production and Distribution and Profit," "The Human Equation," etc.

There will also be a series of group meetings for employers, their managerial representatives and the general staff at which generally each of the several institutions unite in a joint meeting. These meetings will be held in the evening at 8 o'clock at some convenient point of meeting. Arrangements will also be made to have Mr. Sheldon visit the various schools and industrial concerns of the city to address a series of meetings to the employees.

When the schools open in the fall an extensive service is rendered to the school system as part of the public works. This also is furnished by the Chamber of Commerce to the teachers and pupils from the sixth grade up without charge.

It is expected that Mr. Sheldon will deliver an address to all the teachers and principals on the subject of "The Philosophy of Education."

It is also planned in the fall to have meetings with the pupils in all the schools from the sixth grade up, including the high school pupils, at which the principle of service is taught in such a way that the school pupils in turn teach the principle to others.

The educational committee of the Chamber of Commerce will also arrange to have Mr. Sheldon address the Ministerial Association of the city. In other cities this is generally followed by many public addresses on religious bodies of all denominations by invitation of religious leaders.

It is also planned to have Mr. Sheldon address civic bodies such as the Kiwanis, Elks, Federated Women's Clubs and other organizations of business and professional people. The services of Mr. Sheldon for one address to all such organizations is offered by the educational committee without charge.

Mr. Sheldon's services are also available through the Chamber of Commerce without charge to the personal people of the city including

Thaw Family Again in Court

Mary Copley Thaw Sues Grandson for $600,000 Which She Claims Was Obtained While She Was Weak in Mind and Body.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, July 21.—The Thaw millions that figured so prominently in the spectacular life of Harry K. Thaw, are again in court.

A complaint, signed in the feeble, unsteady hand of Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, the 83-year-old mother of Stanford White's slayer, was on file in Federal court today, seeking the recovery of $600,000 from her grandson, Lawrence Copley Thaw. She charges the money was secured from her by her grandson while she was "weak in mind and body, and easily influenced."

The money sued for was turned over to her grandson last January, because the complaint set forth, she believed him when he said he had been discriminated against in his father's will.

The father of Lawrence Copley Thaw was Edward T. Thaw, half-brother of Harry K. Thaw. Lawrence is employed in a New York investment securities firm.

POLICE SPREAD DRAGNET FOR "DOPEY" MARINO

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, July 21.—A police dragnet was spread today throughout the entire underworld for John ("Dopey") Marino, a gangster with a prison record.

The police want him in connection with one of the coldest killings in recent history—the shooting in the back of a street railway inspector, carrying $1,800 in small coin, and the fatal wounding of the motorman who came to his aid, Jacob Schumacher, the inspector, died, and R. J. Nichols, the motorman, is not expected to live.

The car in which the killer escaped has been identified as the car belonging to Marino's wife, known as Edna Baltimore, and finger prints on its glossy doors are said to tally with Marino's prints on file at headquarters.

According to unofficial reports, Brown was riding on the engine as the train was backing into empties. As the two cars came together Brown fell from the train and was instantly killed. The train was in charge of Conductor P. B. Young and Engineer C. Tucker.

Brown was a resident of Middletown leaves a wife and a son, three years of age. The deceased was a World War veteran.

REVOLUTIONARY ATTEMPT COST ONLY TWO LIVES

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Lisbon, July 21.—Portugal's most recent revolutionary attempt was almost bloodless, it was determined today. The uprising Sunday, quelled almost as soon as it started, claimed two lives in the whole country. A few persons were injured.

Portugal was quiet today, although the state of martial law had not been withdrawn.

Boarders at Malden.

Malden is entertaining quite a large number of city boarders. The Danville House has sixty-six. The Cox House forty-one and others in that community also are accommodating large numbers.

Lawyers, physicians, surgeons, dentists, engineers, etc. This service takes the form of one address to the Bar Association, the Medical Association, etc., or in some instances one group meeting for all the professions, an evening being set aside for that purpose.

One of the great purposes of the campaign as a whole is the betterment of relationships between employer and employee. In other cities much good has been accomplished by meetings held under the auspices of labor organizations.

The entire summer and early fall will be devoted by Mr. Sheldon to the public service program of the educational campaign and which will be followed up later by the personal service campaign.

Dead Line for Taxi Drivers

Judge Schirick Established One at Rhinebeck Ferry—Four Taxi Drivers Fined $5—Other Cases in Police Court.

Monday afternoon Officer Peter Keresman arrested Morris Miller, Sam Feldman, Philip Tucker and Herman Weinstein, four taxi drivers, on a charge of violating the city ordinance in soliciting fares while standing more than five feet away from their cars at the Rhinebeck ferry shed.

This morning Judge Schirick in police court fined them each $5 and established a new dead line at the ferry. Some time ago stalls were marked out on the pavement for the taxis to be parked it, but today Judge Schirick abolished Stall No. 1 and designated it as the official stand from which taxi drivers might solicit fares.

By using this stall as the dead line over which none of the taxi men could solicit fares, it would tend to preserve order at that point, the court believed.

France Approves German Reply

German Note in Answer to Peace Pact Proposals Regarded With Satisfaction by French Officials and Press.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Paris, July 21.—Germany's reply to France's security pact proposals, characterized by the French foreign minister as satisfactory and affording a basis for further negotiations, met a friendly reception in the Parisian press today.

"World peace has taken an important step forward," seemed the almost unanimous opinion. Although Foreign Minister Briand did not make the text of the German note public, his announcement of the favorable impression created by its contents furnished commentators with the foundation for optimism.

In place of the air of pessimism which has hung over security pact discussions recently, Germany has cast the die for peace based on the League of Nations, in place of adventures with Moscow, was the opinion of Gaulois. With more conservatism Le Matin expressed satisfaction with Germany's answer, but pointed out the difficulties of the negotiations which will follow.

The government organ, Ere Nouvelle, foresaw Briand and Foreign Minister Stresemann meeting before the end of the summer for a talk regarding the proposed pact.

M. Loucheur's Petit Journal saw the influence of British and American financiers in Germany's tractable attitude.

The only adverse note was sounded by the army's favorite newspaper, Echo de Paris, which warned its readers that a "charm exists between the French and the German conceptions of a peace pact."

Victims of Auto Accident in Two City Hospitals

Four Occupants of Car Injured When It Struck Another Car at Boiceville—X-Ray Required to Determine Extent of Injuries.

Monday afternoon about 3 o'clock an automobile accident which has every appearance of being caused by too much speed, took place on the straight stretch of road near Wanderer's Rest at Boiceville, on the Ashokan boulevard. The result is that four persons are in the hospitals here severely injured, one perhaps seriously.

William D. Wilson, of the Mountain View House at Olivera, who is also in the insurance and real estate business at 2322 Grand avenue, The Bronx, is at the Kingston City Hospital with injuries which cannot be determined until an X-Ray examination is made. His injuries may be serious at the Benedictine Hospital are William Hellman of 1922 Washington avenue, The Bronx, suffering from fractured ribs and possible internal injuries; Miss Pearl Silver of New York, a boarder at Olivera, who is suffering with a fracture of the right shoulder, and Miss Pearl Isaacs, also of New York, and a boarder at Olivera, who has a broken right wrist and a possible fracture of the left ankle. All suffered other minor injuries, the extent of which cannot be learned at present. All suffered from shock.

Wilson, driving a sport model Kissel-Kar, left Olivera with his three companions and drove toward Kingston. Persons whom he passed on the way said he was driving fast. When near the Wanderer's Rest, south of Boiceville, he attempted to pass a Ford coupe on the level stretch. Just why his car collided with the Ford is not known. The occupants of the Ford coupe, Patrick J. McKenna of 9119 Armitage street, Cleveland, Ohio, and Ladimer J. Berka of 6601 Osmond street, Cleveland, Ohio, first knew of the approaching car when they heard a signal from the rear and at the same instant they claim they were struck. At that time they were at the right of the road driving at a slow pace and enjoying the scenery. Their car was struck on the rear left wheel and thrown ahead. The car turned over at least twice and landed bottom side up on the road. The two young men escaped injury other than slight cuts from the broken windshield.

After striking the Ford car, the Kissel-Kar ran on down the road a distance of 59 feet and then left the road and ran off the road 62 feet and turned over. Witnesses claim that on the way down one of the girls asked Wilson to drive slow.

The State Troopers were notified of the accident immediately and Sergeant Cunningham sent Troopers Cady and Coons to the scene. An ambulance was sent for and two of the ambulances of Leo V. Grogan responded and conveyed the injured to this city. A large crowd immediately gathered and it was with difficulty that traffic was maintained by the officers. First aid was given the injured while waiting for the ambulances to convey them to the city.

Both women involved in the accident are young women, about 20 years old.

Mr. Wilson, who drove the Kissel-Kar, is well known in this city, having been a resident of Olivera for a number of years.

Measurements and observations made immediately after the accident showed that the Ford was well to the right of the road as it proceeded down the road and that there was ample room for the other car to pass to the left.

The matter was reported to Sheriff Wells and to District Attorney Traver and it is probable that an investigation will be conducted by the authorities to determine the cause of the accident.

Wilson was cared for at the Kingston City Hospital by Dr. A. A. Stern and the others were cared for at the Benedictine Hospital by Doctors John F. Larkin and H. L. Van Norstrand. Their condition today was reported good except for possible serious internal injuries to Helman and Wilson which will be determined by an X-ray.

Scopes Lawyers Agree To Verdict of "Guilty"

Monkey Law Trial Ends When Judge Expunges William Jennings Bryan's Testimony from Record Because It Shed No Light on Issue, and Says Only Question Was Whether Scopes Taught Evolution—Jury Convicts Scopes.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Dayton, Tenn., July 21.—The Tennessee anti-evolution case with its violent conflict between fundamental religion and science over the creation of man came to an abrupt end today when a jury convicted John Thomas Scopes of violating the law prohibiting the teaching of evolution in the public schools.

The jury did not leave their seats to convict Scopes after having been in the court room only three hours. Since the trial began July 10th, the conviction followed a request by defense counsel that the client be found guilty.

Scopes Fined $100. Appeals.
Attorneys for Scopes immediately filed a motion for a new trial which was denied. Then the 24 year old high school professor was called before the bar of justice and sentenced to pay a fine of $100. Defense counsel at once entered a bill of exceptions, their formal move appealing the conviction to the appellate court of Tennessee.

Jury Out Five Minutes.
The verdict was rendered at 11:28 a. m. after the jury had been out but five minutes, to take a single ballot on the court house lawn. The conviction was announced by Captain Jack Thompson, white coated and the wealthiest land owner in the county.

"We find the defendant guilty as charged in the indictment," were his only words.

Scopes Believes Law Unjust.
The court then called Scopes before him and asked the young defendant: "Have you anything to say?"

"Your honor," said Scopes, in a nervous tone, but with simple dignity, "I feel I have been convicted for violating an unjust statute. I for violating an all in my power to shall continue to live which doesn't permit the teaching of truth."

An announcement was made that a Baltimore newspaper had agreed to go on Scopes's bond under the appeal.

Then Dudley Field Malone, of defense counsel, thanked the "state of Tennessee and its hospitable people for permitting us to try these great issues here." The court then gave the defense thirty days in which to prepare their appeal and the trial was ended.

Attorneys for Scopes first entered an agreement in open court to have their client found guilty by the jury. The agreement came after President Judge John T. Raulston barred all the defense's religious witnesses from the stand, excluded their science from the stand, expunged the testimony given yesterday by William Jennings Bryan, a virtually ended the case, as opposing attorneys waived their summing up speeches. The judge instructed the jury to bring in a verdict.

Bryan Eager to Talk.
The court made his unexpected ruling as the result of a personal appeal from Attorney General A. Thomas Stewart, head of the prosecution, who took newspapermen into custody, who took the Bryan testimony to have to expunge the Bryan testimony if the judge did not act. Bryan sat at counsel table during the proceeding, eager to resume the stand and more eager to examine Clarence Darrow as agreed upon at yesterday's session. The judge's ruling inferentially barred Darrow from the stand.

Defense Wiped Out.
The decision wiped out the last vestige of the Scopes defense because it barred all religious testimony from the trial. With their scientific testimony last week, the Scopes attorneys closed their case and the jury was called in to wind up the trial.

"Our defense witnesses are excluded, we are denied the right to cross-examine the state's witnesses," said Dudley Field Malone. "There is no need of going on, so we close our case."

An exception to the order was taken immediately by defense counsel. Darrow told the court the testimony was sworn to by the defense, contention that the Bible cannot be interpreted literally.

Bryan Agrees Testimony Was Improper.
That brought Bryan to his feet, holding his fan. He addressed the court with great fervor.

"I fully agree with the court that the testimony taken yesterday was not legitimate or proper," said Bryan. "I was not in a position to raise an objection in that I was willing to have it argued for me without reservation, my willingness to be cross-examined."

Then, turning to the court, Bryan asked, "You expunged the question as well as the answers?"

"Yes," replied Judge Raulston.

Wants His Questions Known.
"I shall make a statement to the press, raising them a list of questions, which I would have asked defense counsel if they had taken the witness stand as they said they would," Bryan added.

"Go out on the lawn and make that speech," said Darrow, drawing. "I object to the speech."

Bryan charged the defense with "hiding behind a screen of the law." "I object to that," Darrow shouted.

"We are willing to meet Mr. Bryan for further discussion of this subject in any form that he chooses," shouted Dudley Field Malone.

Bryan Shed No Light.
Announcing that he would expunge Bryan's testimony, the judge said:

"I feel that the testimony of Mr. Bryan can shed no light upon any issue before the higher court. The issue is whether Mr. Scopes taught that man came from a lower order of animals. It is not a question whether God created man all at once or whether God created him by a slow process."

"As I see it after due deliberation, Mr. Bryan's testimony cannot aid the higher courts in determining that issue. Therefore, I am pleased to expunge the testimony of Bryan from that record."

Judge's Remark Signalled Collapse.
It was a chance remark by the judge which signalled the collapse of the trial. In commenting on the exclusion of religious witnesses, the judge said the only question before him was whether Scopes taught evolution and he thought the professor had.

"Well, if he's guilty," drawled the imperturbable Darrow, "there's nothing left but to bring in the verdict. I'll enter in an agreement now to have my client found guilty and we'll end the trial."

"That suits me," said Attorney General A. Thomas Stewart, chief of prosecution.

"All right, it's all over now," Darrow said with a snap of his suspenders. "Let the clerk enter it on the record and we'll all go home."

"Will you help me arrange our appeal," Darrow asked Stewart.

"Yes, sir; we'll do all we can."

No Closing Arguments.
The attorneys then told the judge they wanted him to instruct the jury without hearing closing arguments or any further testimony. The judge agreed, recessing the court to prepare his charge.

Before court convened it was said Stewart has forbidden Bryan to resume the stand at today's session and refused even to let him examine Darrow, which was to the Commoner's "pay" for appearing as a defense witness.

The seriousness of the situation in the ranks of state counsel was revealed by Sue K. Hicks, one of the local prosecuting attorneys. He yelled the direct purpose by denouncing the tactics of defense counsel.

"The prosecution will move to dismiss the case against Scopes if the defense continues to obstruct the trial," said Hicks. "If the defense insists on examining any more witnesses or takes any more time in reading testimony into the record, the state will ask the court to dismiss the case. Under the Tennessee law, the attorney general in charge of the prosecution can do this."

Bryan's Purpose in Testifying.
The Commoner, meanwhile, was said to have insisted upon his examination of Darrow. Dudley Field Malone and of Arthur Garfield Hays, all of defense counsel. His own appearance as a witness, he said, even while on the stand, was to show the world a real fundamentalist was unafraid to be questioned about the Bible at any time, at any place or by any man.

What Bryan Believes.
In his sensational appearance, Bryan voiced the creed of fundamentalists. For himself, he said, he believed that "Jonah lived in the belly of a whale for three days."

That Jesus actually made the sun stand still, that Eve actually came from a rib of Adam and that human existence was only begun in 4004 B. C.

To the defense, the examination of Bryan was a purely local move. They called the Commoner as a Bible expert to prove that even the best known fundamentalist in America did not accept the Bible literally.

They did prove this, too, for Bryan says he denied literal translations of the Bible. Even though he accepted the Jonah, Joshua and Eve accounts, "We called Bryan to show that an man of intelligence accepts the Bible literally," said Hays. "Bryan is a public scholar and he agrees with us that this world may be as old as the hills and the story of creation cannot be accepted literally."

When Darrow Applauded Darrow.
After hearing Darrow question Bryan, there would be no doubt that Bryan was to examine Darrow. The

PROTECTING THE LANDS.

Of the $3,000,000,000 of preventable losses from all causes in 1924 in the United States approximately $1,000,000,000 was stolen money and goods. Of that billion $750,000,000 represented that suffered by investors in stocks and bonds of companies and corporations organized as vehicles of exploitation, all well developed, gold mining, and investment propositions built upon the quickness of deliberate larceny.

New York state was imposed upon to just the extent of its size. Peculations by bucketshop keepers, dynamite salesmen and the organizers of questionable enterprises were as relatively large as the population of the largest state. The Empire State was fertile for the depredations of the swindlers. Millions were stolen each week from investors in every section. The operations of the Martin Anti-Stock Fraud law had the effect of curbing the activities of some of the speculators, but this statute was then only formative. It proved a useful bludgeon against the most conspicuous frauds, but did not enable the state to snuff out the life of secret and insidious swindling schemes.

It fell to Attorney General Ottinger to devise means of coping with the situation. He drafted the so-called Webb-Phelps amendments which have given the Martin law the power to check frauds before they are undertaken; in other words, to forestall contemplated crookedness. Incorporating a provision requiring the publication of the names of dealers and the character and name of stocks and bonds proposed to be sold to the public, the attorney general opened up an avenue of preliminary investigation which places in his hands the information necessary to determine the worth of securities before they are offered for sale. It is a crime, punishable by a jail sentence, for a dealer not to publish what he has to sell.

The effect of the plan is apparent already. The crooks in large numbers have gone out of business or out of the state. A survey of New York indicates that the falling off in stock offerings of illegitimate character has been tremendous. Given a fair trial, the new Martin Anti-Stock Frauds law will reduce to virtual nullity New York state's share of the preventable stock and bond losses of $750,000,000.

DEADLY AMBITION.

Granting that the world would be a sorrowful place in which to live were ambition absent, it also is a fact that ambition of a certain grade has injured as many, if not more, than it has helped. In public life not a few men, being over-zealous, have been retarded in their desire to advance, and now that they have the vote and are seeking official recognition the same rule will apply to women. Many very capable officials have been rejected, however, because of an uncontrollable demand for higher honors before they had half finished the term of office which they were holding.

It is accepted in political circles, relatively so at least, that nearly every Governor of the Empire State soon comes to be as good a governor as he might be because he commences to see the White House in the foreground. In his endeavors to prepare himself for the presidency he pays too little attention to responsibilities at hand and devotes his time to problems he would prefer to assume in the national capital. Of course this does not apply to every politician. Nine out of ten despisers, however, will support the deduction that as a general proposition, men who become Governor want to be President and in allowing their ambition to run wild take themselves from the list of those available. A glaring demonstration of deadly ambition was the attack of Governor Smith on President Coolidge. It was only evidence of an uncontrollable ambition and precisely what might be expected of any politician who tries to cover too much territory and lets his ambition run wild.

A lay evangelist is reported to have converted the town of Herbin, Ill., and brought such peace and good will between the various warring factions there that shooting irons have been permanently laid away. This is indeed a sudden calm in the case of people so accustomed to excitement and gun-play, and one would think that only a master hypnotist could induce them to stay put and keep lamb-like permanently.

That Body of Yours

A REAL BENEFIT.

It should not be necessary to talk about the advantages of massage, or a "rub down," as it is called in athletics.

Anybody connected with athletics knows that a properly applied massage hurries along the fatigue products and broken tissue, and the athlete is prevented from becoming stale. I am often asked about the virtues of the various liniments. They contain menthol, arnica, witchhazel, alcohol, and laudanum, and so forth.

Some famous trainers have had equally famous "rubs," and much of the wonderful success of their pupils, was attributed to this "secret" mixture that he used in rubbing them down. That men have run fast, football players shown wonderful recuperative powers without a massage or a rub, is of course true, but I have in mind an internationally known sprinter, one able to beat ten seconds for the hundred yards, who disdained to have a rub for some years. He was prevailed upon to take the rub along with the other athletes, just for the sake of the example. Thereafter he was a firm exponent of the "rub" as he said he felt more resilient than at any time in his career. Further, he ran his distance in his "best" time, every race he entered.

Now as to the liniments themselves and their virtues, there is only this to say. If an athlete is tired, sore in his muscles, and sore at heart, the liniment that has a little arnica or laudanum in it, will deaden the pain temporarily, and thus the trainer can go right after the sore spots and massage, rub, or knead them, thus loosening them up, and hurrying along the circulation, which means the removal of the broken down tissue, and the building up of new.

The only other method that would loosen up things would be indulgence in some light form of exercise such as walking, swimming and so forth. But a chap sore and tired is not going to take exercise where every step or every movement, means pain. Hence the value of your massage or rub down with the majority of athletes.

If you do any unusual physical work, the materials manufactured in your muscles have just the same effect as a foreign body in the eye, ear, or elsewhere. Hence the rubbing or massage gets everything moving away in the blood stream. A hot bath followed by a rub, fits you for more work the next day. Without it, it might be two or three days before these waste products would get out of the system by means of the circulation of the blood.

Hobbies of the Great and the Near Great

Being a Series of Intimate Glimpses Into the Fads and Foibles of Well-Known Figures in National Life.

This is the second of a series of intimate sketches of the great and near great in Washington. Their hobbies reveal this galaxy of national politicians as "regular fellows" with just as many human traits as the man on the farm or in the factory.

CHARLES G. DAWES.

The vice president of the United States is revealed as a hotel proprietor in the "hobby investigation" of national politicians.

His underslung pipe or his slashing attack upon senatorial rules may carry Charles G. Dawes into the printed page of history, but he will always gain the greatest personal satisfaction from his little string of hotels—"flops for the down-and-outers." Two of these institutions are located in Chicago, one in Boston.

The searchlight of publicity has seldom been turned upon this side of the vice president's life. It is to him a tragic hobby, for the first of the Dawes hotels was established in Chicago as a lasting memorial to the memory of a son drowned in Lake Geneva, Wis., in 1912.

Operated at Cost.

The hotels are operated at cost for the benefit of the men who are "down and out." Meals and a clean, warm bed are provided, and if a man is penniless, he can earn his food and rest. The vice president takes a personal interest in their management. He frequently visits the institutions and always supervises their management. All losses come from the Dawes pocket-book.

On a recent trip to Boston, Dawes spoke at exercises commemorating the Battle of Lexington. He renewed his attack on senatorial rules, and the speech attracted wide public attention. A little while later he slipped away from admiring friends to visit his Boston hotel. There he gained greater satisfaction from helping the "down-and-outers" than he had derived from hearing the plaudits of a multitude.

His underslung pipe—revolutionizing the pipe industry—is a hobby, too, of course, as is the vice president's love for grand opera. His own composition, "Melody in A Major," attests the Dawes love for music, and he has been a financial backer of the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

Likes Youngsters.

Children and the movies are other hobbies of his. The vice president is never so contented as when he gathers a crowd of youngsters into his Evanston (Ill.) home to flash a comedy upon a screen hung in a hallway. The vice president operates his own private motion-picture machine, and his usual audience includes not only the adopted Dawes children, but his youthful "pals" from the neighborhood.

Books, many written in Spanish and Greek, are another hobby. So is golf fishing and duck hunting. Dawes likewise loves animals, and Merico, a wire-haired terrier, is his favorite pet. The vice president's inauguration last March 4, was almost spoiled because Merico got lost when Dawes came to Washington to be sworn in and to "bawl out" the senate. There may be no connection, of course, but immediately after he received word from Evanston that Merico was missing, the vice president made his first famous attack on the senate right to its face. Later, however, the terrier was recovered by a neighbor.

Tomorrow—William E. Borah.

HENRIETTA, DUCHESS OF ORLEANS.

One of the most tragic and romantic figures in French history is Henrietta, Duchess of Orleans.

She was a daughter of Charles II, King of England, and her beauty attracted to her many suitors. If she was beautiful, she was also somewhat indiscreet, and, furthermore, gave her husband much reason for jealousy. Even his off-repeated threats went unheeded by the butterfly duchess, and it was an open secret that her affections were not alone bestowed upon her husband. On June 30, 1770, in her 26th year, she was found dead in her bed. Suspicions were entertained that she was poisoned by her jealous spouse.

ANNIVERSARIES.

It is said that on or about July 21, in the year 1756 B. C., the Ark was opened to release its inhabitants, which was forty days after the appearance of the tops of the mountains.

It was on July 21, 1790, that the Battle of the Pyramids was fought. Murad with 22 other Beys was defeated by the French under Napoleon, with the loss of forty cannon, many camels and their whole baggage and provisions. It was in this battle that the great Corsican won for himself the name of "King of Fire" among the Mohammedans. This victory resulted in the conquest of all of lower Egypt.

On this date in 1861, one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War was opened. This was the first battle of Bull Run.

FIRST CANADIAN RAILWAY.

The premier line of steam railroad in Canada, from Laprarie to St. Johns, Quebec, was opened 89 years ago today, July 21, 1836. This insignificant line, only a few miles in length, was the nucleus of the great transportation system which now covers Canada with a network of steel. For 15 years after the completion of the first railway line, further building projects made little headway in Canada, but in 1851 the era of railway development set in, and by the end of that decade the Dominion had over 2,000 miles of lines. The most ambitious of the early railway companies was the Grand Trunk, which extended from Portland, Maine, to Sarnia, on the western frontier of Canada. Next in importance was the Great Western, which was constructed from Niagara Falls to Sarnia and Windsor. In the years that followed railway building in Canada was overdone, and the loss of millions of British capital in unfortunate projects aroused a distrust of such investments that was near wrecking the most ambitious of all Canadian railway schemes, the first transcontinental line, which was on the brink of failure, before it was finally completed in 1856.

State Comptroller Murphy in His Talk on Finances of Municipalities of State Disapproves of Elaborate School Buildings—Recommends Pay as You Go Policy.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Rochester, July 21.—Criticism of the tendency on the part of localities to spend huge sums upon over-elaborate public schools at a time when their finances cannot stand the strain was voiced here today by State Comptroller Vincent B. Murphy in a speech before the National Association of Comptrollers and Accounting Officers meeting here in annual convention.

In his address, which dealt with the finances of the municipalities of this state as well as with those of the state itself, Comptroller Murphy expressed fear that the public mind is losing its sense of economic proportion.

In substantiation of his contention, he pointed to the enormous increase in the net funded debts of the state and its localities. He also urged localities to adopt a pay-as-you-go policy and to resist the temptation of bond issues.

"The president of the country, the governor of a state and the mayor of a city used to be the three outstanding figures in government," said Mr. Murphy. "There is a fourth now—he is the bond salesman."

"The bond salesman is the gentleman who drums up the cash while future generations of taxpayers are being brought up to fear God, love their country and redeem the bonds. Some of us wonder how government could exist in those black days when bond issues were unknown."

"Thanks largely to bond issues, the net funded debt of the state at present amounts to $229,000,000. It is increasing at a rate of about $8,000,000 a year."

"The net funded debt of our localities was $1,500,000,000 in 1923, the latest available figure. It appears to be increasing at a rate of more than $1,000,000 a week."

Comptroller Murphy admitted that since the war there has been a legitimate increase in the costs of governmental activities, but he added that new activities have been undertaken under the pressure of popular demand and because public officers have lacked the courage to oppose them.

"The outcome is," continued Mr. Murphy, "that we of the present are getting things for which those of the future must pay. Of course, in this state there is a limit to the amount of bonds localities may issue, but what is going to happen when that limit is reached? Even now a goodly share of current revenue is used for sinking fund purposes."

"The trouble is that the public mind today looks upon billions as if billions were quarters and upon millions as if millions were dimes. Thrift—the foundation upon which this nation was built—is in danger."

Comptroller Murphy then gave a brief outline of how the public dollar is expended and said that most of it goes into schools. He then criticized the policy which calls for over-ornamental school structures.

"We have," he said, "gone in for finger-pointed architecture in school construction. We are eliminating the gimcrack city hall and the scroll-saw capitol. It would be a good thing to spend the expensive, super-ornamental public school on its way. We would save a ton of money by doing that money which we cannot afford to spend. I am not discussing education. I believe that even as a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so a nation is no more intelligent than its least educated citizen. But there is a vast degree of difference between education and architecture."

Mr. Murphy said that the total cost of public education in New York State for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1923, was over $216,000,000. The corresponding figure for the year 1910 was $89,000,000. Of the $216,000,000 spent in 1923 only $185,000,000 represented current revenues. The remainder was financed through bond issues.

He also pointed out that the total gross outstanding indebtedness for education in this state at the close of 1923 was $285,000,000—twice the amount outstanding ten years ago.

"Some will answer," continued Mr. Murphy, "that there has been an increase in the school population—that is true. I am not finding fault with the money being spent in the school rooms but with the sums expended upon unnecessary constructional trimmings. I am not criticizing the building of schools, but the kind of schools we build."

"Not that I advocate the spartan simplicity of the little red school house, but there is a happy medium between that and the palatial structures which are going up."

"I know that in our large cities the Standard Room Only sign hangs over the doors of the schools. We must and we should provide adequate school facilities. The schools must be well lighted, well ventilated, well heated, solidly constructed and equipped with proper facilities."

"But why have Byzantine arches or Grecian columns when we can't afford them? If we could afford them, that would be another story, but even then schools are not judged by the amount of ornamental architecture that goes into them, but by the intellectual development of children who go out of them."

Another factor in money consumption singled out by the comptroller is the construction and up-keep of streets and highways due to the in-

Notable Speaker At Chautauqua

Montaville Flowers, distinctly a publicist, will be one of ten speakers on the Chautauqua program, opening on July 24. He will speak on the subject, "Of One Mind." His life has fitted him to speak knowledgeably of international relations and world progress. Born and reared on a farm in Ohio, he is now a practical man of affairs, a publicist, author and orange grower of California. A graduate of the Ohio Northern University, the Ohio University and the College of Music of Cincinnati, his early life was spent in public service as superintendent of school, clerk of a board of education, founder of one of the great pioneer Lyceum Bureaus and in business enterprises in which he was successful. His executive ability is outstanding. Three times the International Lyceum and Chautauqua Association of America has elected him as its president. He is an American in every fiber. His patriotism is a passion. His pamphlets and books have given him a permanent place in the regard of the American people.

During the war he organized and conducted at Washington in relation to the committee on public information, "The National Conference of American Sections," which received the highest praise of the American press. He edited "What Every American Should Know About the War," a book which has been bought by colleges and libraries in many countries and has brought him fine letters from European statesmen and governments. It has been said of his book "The Japanese Conquest of American Opinion," that it is the most complete and calmly reasoned out statement which the Asiatic problem has yet received.

He is now general secretary of the Alcohol Education Association of America. He will deliver his lecture the fourth night of Chautauqua.

Edmund H. Green, who recently purchased of William D. Ryan the frame store and residence property, 99-101 North Front street, corner of Converse street, has a force of builders at work tearing out the stores preparatory to their reconstruction into two modern stores. The corner store which will be deepened will be occupied by Mr. Green as a grocery and meat market, with new fixtures and a modern frontage of plate glass. The front of the building will be stuccoed.

Mr. Green, who has been in business with his father E. Hoyt Green, at 39 North Front street, will move the stock of that store to the new location when reconstruction is finished. As has been before stated, the brick store and apartment building of E. Hoyt Green at 39 North Front street, has been sold to James Nekos of 308 Wall street.

ST. STEPHEN'S FACULTY TO EAT WITH STUDENTS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Annandale-on-Hudson, July 21.—Members of the St. Stephen's College faculty will eat with the students in one large hall when sessions are resumed in the fall. The interior of Preston Hall has been remodeled to conform with the dining halls of Oxford and Cambridge universities in England.

Evening dinner will be a formal affair, with both faculty members and students wearing academic gowns. The college president and professors will be seated at tables upon a dais and the three under classes at the long tables. Women members of the faculty will be seated in the annex, as formerly. The senior class, four at a table, also will dine there.

The plan is said by college authorities to be the result of a desire to make college dinner a more pleasant and formal affair, but is not an attempt to supervise meals.

creasing number of heavy duty trucks as well as passenger autos. He said provisions should be made for a more equitable distribution of street and highway funds to the localities.

Comptroller Murphy called attention to the report recently issued by the Legislative Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment. Among other things, it hints that it might be necessary for localities to create new sources of revenue such as a classified business tax, an occupational tax or a small surtax on the State Income Tax.

"Haven't we enough taxes now without looking for new ones?" asked Mr. Murphy. "Instead of increasing taxes, we ought to reduce them. Instead of adding to our obligations we ought to cut them down. The federal government is headed in that direction. The states and the localities might do well in following that lead."

"President Coolidge last winter revealed that the various local governments in the country are increasing their debts at the rate of $1,000,000,000 a year."

"Isn't that enough of a warning? It is time to reduce—time to retrench. One of the best ways to start doing it is to acquaint the public with the true financial facts. Let the public know that unless expenditures are curtailed the tax burden soon will be such that the Old Homestead, of happy memory, soon will be covered with mortgages instead of ivy."

After Half Century As Saloon, The Doors are Closed for Alterations—Will Reopen as Fruit Store Conducted by Ex-Alderman Mann.

After a life of over half a century as a saloon, the Old Homestead on Abel street recently closed its doors, and workmen are now busy making alterations to the building which will be opened shortly as a fruit store by former Alderman Ralph Mann, who purchased the building several years ago. A gas station will also form a part of the business.

There were probably few saloons in this vicinity that were more widely known than the Old Homestead. In the years before the Eighteenth Amendment to the constitution went into effect, many of its patrons formed an organization known as the Old Homestead Club and its annual outings will be remembered by many of the older residents of the city. The Old Homestead was conducted in a way that caused it to be regarded more as a club than as a business place.

Brooklyn Team Here Tomorrow

Record Crowd Expected To See Brooklyn National League Club Play Colonials at Fair Grounds Wednesday Afternoon.

The Brooklyn Nationals will have an assortment of famous players in their line-up when they meet the Colonials here Wednesday afternoon. They have a choice of powerful twirlers to use against the locals. Art Brown who the Dodgers recently acquired from a team in the Oklahoma League will have as good a chance as any to be chosen for the mound work. Osbourne, a first-string twirler, will be on hand for the contest. A left hander, Jess Petty is another probability for the work of tossing them over. Rube Ehrhardt will also accompany the club. The Dodgers have the choice of two catchers in Taylor and DeBerry. Hargreaves who caught the game last season when the Brooklyn club played here is also a strong possibility for the receiving job.

Jack Fournier will be on the initial sack. Jack is a heavy slugger and pounds them out from the left side of the plate. Fournier started professional baseball way back in 1908 at the age of 16 years as a catcher with the Seattle club. Fournier has been with the Chicago White Sox, the Yankees and the St. Louis Nationals. Tierney will occupy the second sack with Ford at short. Andy High is almost certain to cover third. Andy has been with the Dodgers since 1922, coming to the Brooklyn club from a southern league. High is also a wicked man with the stick, last season connecting 191 hits in 582 trips at the plate with a batting average .328.

Manager Zach Wheat will play one of the outfield positions if he makes the trip with the Dodgers with Dick Cox, Eddie Brown and Dick Lottus as a choice for the other two outfield jobs.

The Brooklyn club will be a big attraction at the Fair Grounds for all local fans know that the major leaguers did not find the Colonials an easy team to battle with last season. It is not expected that the locals will give the Dodgers a trimming but they are sure to give them plenty of trouble. But the locals have downed a big league team before and the fans may see it happen again Wednesday. The game is scheduled to start at 4 o'clock with a record crowd in attendance.

Dempsey's First Bout With Kearns

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New York, July 21.—Harry Wills and Gene Tunney will have to wait; so will Bartley Madden, Martin Burke, Luke McGuire and other prominent ones mentioned as opponents for the champion. Jack Dempsey's first bout will be fought in Los Angeles 24 hours after his arrival and his opponent will be Jack Kearns, none other. They are due for the big smash that is expected to leave Kearns as manager of Dempsey in name only.

That was the word broadcast here today in the wake of the departed champion of the world, as the New York State Athletic Commission prepared to sit in indignant conclave on his action of yesterday in leaving all and sundry here holding the bag.

Tex Rickard has accepted Dempsey's portfolio and will go before the commission meeting as his duly appointed representative. He said before the meeting that he believed the board would grant Dempsey's request for a warm-up bout or so before meeting Wills next year, proving that, as a forerunner, Mr. Rickard is a great promoter.

With the affront of yesterday fresh in its mind, it is almost certain the commission will reiterate its stand that Dempsey must trolly with Wills first.

Rickard's arguments, as outlined to the writer today, will be three in number: That he, Rickard, had been given carte blanche in the matter of meeting the commission's every demand, indicating the champion's sincerity; that he believed Paddy Mullins, manager of Wills, would agree to play along by waiving Wills's prior claim to a Dempsey match; that the champion was forced to return to the coast to protect his interests there.

The latter point, they say, involves a final showdown with Kearns and a split up of their mutual interests, with the exception of the manager's contract that Kearns holds. It will be strictly a fight in short and long division, it seems, and the experts favor Kearns. The latter may be giving away a lot of weight but most of this will be below the shoulders.

Universal Team Beat Van Slykes

Monday evening the Universal Road Machinery Co. at the Athletic Field, cleared the Van Slyke & Horton Cigar Company the small end of a 15 to 10 tally. The road builders were not handed the struggle without an effort as a couple of times it looked very dark for the road machinery workers, especially in the final frame when the sacks were full and none out. In this frame two runs were scored on an error committed by the pitcher. Colvin, however, braced up and pulled himself out of this predicament very nicely and allowed no more to tally.

Hits seemed to flow plentiful for both sides but especially for the Universal team. Ploskie started on the mound for the Van Slyke aggregation and for the first couple of innings pitched fine ball, allowing a few scattered hits. In the fourth frame passes were handed out and hits bunched and seven runs chalked up for the machinery builders. Smith then took command of the situation and held the Universal team pretty well during the remainder.

Hits seemed to flow plentiful for both sides but especially for the Universal team. Ploskie started on the mound for the Van Slyke aggregation and for the first couple of innings pitched fine ball, allowing a few scattered hits. In the fourth frame passes were handed out and hits bunched and seven runs chalked up for the machinery builders. Smith then took command of the situation and held the Universal team pretty well during the remainder.
